COMMENT OF THE DAY

Lyttelton's Concession

IT is hardly likely that the more enthusiastic of the Colony's constitutional reformers will be wholly satisfied with Mr. Oliver Lyttelton's House of Commons statement made yesterday. The measure of immediate reform which the Secretary of State for the Colonies has approved amounts to an increase of two elected unofficial members of the Urban Council. But he does not feel the present time opportune for constitutional changes of a more major character. Most will agree with Mr. Lyttelton that at this time it would be more than ordinarily difficult and complicated a task to introduce reforms such as the creation of a Municipal Council or reconstituting the Legislature in such a manner as to furnish it with an Unofficial majority, and for the time being the Colony can well afford to rest content with the proposed enlargement of the Urban Council—a body which is already carrying out the basic functions of a Municipal Council, and whose duties are likely to be still further widened. In authorising an increase of two elected members the Secretary of State is going some way towards satisfying the demand made by the existing Council whose members feel that they are not sufficiently numerous to deal most effectively with their increasing functions. Moreover, Mr. Lyttelton's proposition will bring the number of elected representatives in fairer balance to the number of nominated Unofficials and will give the public a feeling, of being more adequately represented. It is possible that Mr. Lyttelton's brief reference to constitutional reform of a "major character" may leave the impression that the matter has been abandoned for all time. It is inconceivable that he intends to convey such a meaning; nevertheless a reassuring statement from Government that a more substantial measure of constitutional reform will be considered in the future would be welcome.

The Right Phrase

AN unusual article has recently been written by Mr. Po Yip, Peking's Minister of Finance, and published in the Communist Journal. In it he offers an estimate of the number of opponents liquidated by the Chinese Communists on the mainland. Governments are usually reticent about the number of people they have killed: even the Nazis did not like the statistics to be known. But Po coolly informs his readers that "in the past five years we have liquidated more than two million bandits. Bandits are non-existent in China now, and the social order has become stable as never before." This extraordinary admission emanates from a city which is not only the administrative capital of China, but, as one commentator has observed, is the New Jerusalem for many fanatics and some idealists throughout Asia; and it comes at the moment when a Communist "peace" conference is being held in the same city. How will it be received by the outside world, and what will future British visitors invited to Peking say to their hosts? "The social order has become stable as never before," says Po. "As never before" is the right phrase. The Nazis in their extinction of the Jews and the Russian Communists in their slaughter of their opponents took far longer.

STATE OF EMERGENCY IN KENYA

Troops Arrive By Air 130 AFRICANS ARRESTED

London, Oct. 20. British Fusiliers flew into Nairobi tonight and the entire Kenya colony was put under a state of emergency to aid the fight against the anti-European native Mau Mau terrorists.

As the state of emergency was proclaimed, police swooped to arrest more than 130 Africans suspected of being members of the Mau Mau, the Colonial Office announced here.

The Fusiliers, first of a battalion to be airlifted to Kenya from the Suez Canal Zone, went straight into prepared barracks.

Sir Evelyn Baring, after less than a month in the Colony as Governor, said today: "We have reached an extremely serious position and we must take steps to restore law and order and protect the lives of innocent people."

The state of emergency will give the police more freedom to root out the ringleaders of Mau Mau, who claim they will drive the white man out of Kenya.

The newly-arrived troops will not take part in arrests themselves.

The rest of the Fusiliers battalion will reach Nairobi on Tuesday and Wednesday. At the same time a battalion of the King's African Rifles has been moved across the frontier from Tanganyika, and a further two companies of the Rifles from Uganda.

The timing of arrests and troop movements has been concerted by the Colonial Office and the Middle East Command.

Mr. Oliver Lyttelton, the Colonial Secretary, will make a statement in the House of Commons on Tuesday, in which he will give reasons for the arrests.

SITUATION WORSENS

Strong action was decided on recently owing to the rapid deterioration of the situation in Kenya. Between September 13 and September 30 there were 13 murders and three suicides attributed to the Mau Mau. In October there were another four murders, including the assassination of one of the most revered African chiefs, Senior Chief Wanjiku.

There have been more than 40 known murders and many instances of intimidation of witnesses.

Another sinister factor has been that recent Mau Mau terrorists have been armed with firearms, whereas earlier they had only knives.

Opinion in London is that though emergency action has been taken only with reluctance, there was no alternative in face of mounting lawlessness, violence and disorder in a part of the colony.

The early Mau Mau crimes were perpetrated at night and by stealth, but the terrorists have become progressively bolder.

There was evidence that terror had already resulted in a holdup of economic development, potential investors in capital projects having been alarmed by the deterioration in the situation.

Responsibility for the terror campaign is believed to extend beyond the Mau Mau secret society itself, which may have been only a tool.

NO IMMEDIATE TRIAL

Men who have been arrested will probably be moved to a detention area in the northern province of Kenya. A judicial investigation will take place later.

Arrested persons will not immediately be brought to trial. The purpose of emergency powers is to enable the executive to act without judicial processes.

Earlier today in the House of Commons Mr. Lyttelton said he was not criticising missionaries or the Kenya Government when he said last week that the suppression of tribal dances by the missionaries had given an impetus to secret societies.

"Tribal dancing is controlled under bye-laws, but missionary societies naturally and rightly advise their followers against taking part in certain dances held to be incompatible with the Christian faith," he said. "It was important to realise, however, that if the African

Gold Coins Galore

London, Oct. 20. Sixty thousand "replica sovereigns" indistinguishable from British sovereigns except in minor details—turned up in Saudi Arabia, it was learned here today. The news has unsettled the world market in sovereigns, it was reported. Two months ago a Swiss Federal Court refused to extradite two men accused of producing sovereigns and other gold coins in Italy, ruling that the sovereign could not be counterfeited because it was no longer legal tender in Britain. The British Treasury said the Sovereign was still legal tender. In the official British view, sovereigns are made only at British Royal mints and all others are counterfeit. — Reuter.

OPIUM SMUGGLING CHARGES DISMISSED

No US Jurisdiction

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.

Three Chinese seamen today were dismissed on charges that they conspired to smuggle more than $1,000,000 worth of raw opium into the United States aboard a British tanker when the United States Commissioner ruled that the United States had no jurisdiction in the case and that it was a matter for British courts.

Nang Chong Jong, 35, of Foochow, China, a storekeeper on the tanker Silverdale, and two seamen, Ah Tai, 43, of Foochow, and Long Ah Woo, 60, of Singapore, were arrested when the ship yesterday was found 111 pounds of narcotics as the vessel docked at the oil refinery pier.

Other crewmen were detained aboard ship while Customs agents continued to search for additional narcotics.

British officers testified that Nang and Ah Tai were caught smoking opium pipes while the tanker was off the Azores and that Long offered the captain and the chief engineer of the ship $1,000 each to forget the charges.

FOR BRITISH COURTS

The Commissioner ruled that since the opium smoking and finding of narcotics occurred far outside United States territorial waters and aboard a British ship, it would be a matter for the British courts.

The three seamen were then released in the custody of the ship's officers. The Federal agents said they would continue to hold the seized opium.

The Silverdale was on her maiden voyage with a crew recruited in Singapore when the incident occurred. The Port Collector, Michael Bradley, explained that the shipper, Captain D. B. Edgar, told the usual Customs men who boarded the ship about finding 50 pounds of opium. Federal agents then uncovered an additional 61 pounds.

Captain Edgar discounted reports that the crew became mutinous during the voyage. — United Press.

BROWDERS DENY CHARGE

New York, Oct. 20.

The former American Communist Party secretary, Earl Browder, and his wife Irene, pleaded not guilty today to charges that they had lied to obtain her American citizenship.

Their counsel, Mr. John Rogge, said he needed time to prepare their case, and the judge fixed November 17 for argument on defense motions.

Browder and his wife were shown $2,500 bail. The American Communist Party disclaimed Browder in 1940. — Reuter.

US Aid For Indo-China Likely If Chinese Communists Commit Aggression

Washington, Oct. 20.

Authoritative sources said today that a firm commitment by the United States to rush air and naval aid to Indo-China in the event of Chinese aggression there may result from the top-secret five-power military conference on defence of Southeast Asia, held in the National Defence Department earlier this month.

They said the recommendations of this conference had been referred to the governments of the United States, Britain, France, Australia and New Zealand for governmental approval.

Atomic War Prediction

London, Oct. 20.

An atomic World War will probably last only a few weeks with an overwhelming victory for one side or the other, according to a military expert's forecast in the 1952 edition of Brassey's Annual, the armed forces year-book published today.

The writer, Brigadier Cyril Nelson Barclay, said it is probable one side will be found to preponderate in types of atomic weapon, technique of employment and possibly defensive measures.

Brigadier Barclay dwelt on the possibility of atomic weapons being turned to the destruction of enemy crops and bringing about sterility in the land.

This seemed feasible on a considerable scale, he wrote.

In his opinion the existence of atomic weapons reduced the chances of a third World War.

Should it come, however, fear of reprisals might confine the fighting to conventional type weapons.

"Although we may surmise that the United States has a substantial lead in (atomic) development, this is not certain, secrecy in atomic matters is not difficult to maintain, and it may be that the Soviet Union is better equipped than we imagine," Brigadier Barclay wrote. — Reuter.

Death Of Basil Radford

London, Oct. 20.

Basil Radford, famous for his stage and screen role of a typical public school cricket-loving Englishman, died in hospital here today.

Eight days ago he collapsed during a cabaret turn in West End restaurant. Radford, 55, had been in ill health for the past five years. His recent films included: "Dead of Night," "Passport to Pimlico," and "Quartet." — Reuter.

Gold Seized On Hongkong Ship

Singapore, Oct. 21.

Thirteen hundred "tels" of gold and 135 tins of gold coins, valued at about $490,000, were seized yesterday when Customs officers raided the 3,439-ton Hai King when she arrived from Japan and Hongkong en route to Bangkok.

Two members of the crew were arrested and will appear in court today. — United Press.

23 Dead In Train Accident

Coaches Derailed

Johannesburg, Oct. 20.

Twenty-three persons were killed and about 40 injured when 10 coaches of the night mail train from Durban to Johannesburg were derailed on Monday.

The accident occurred at Heventree, about 12 miles north of Eastcourt, Natal, early Monday morning.

The train was moving at high speed when the leading coaches jumped the rails on a wide curve. Three wooden coaches were derailed and ground to splinters. A fourth swung around, blocking another line and coming to rest on top of another coach.

The dead and injured were mainly Indians and coloured people.

Passengers climbed from the train in the darkness amid the cries of the injured.

With flickering lanterns, the trains crew searched under the wreckage for people pinned down by twisted metal and carriage-work and sought to free them with crowbars and jacks.

The injured were laid in rows near some African huts, but no bandages or medical help was available until a doctor arrived from Eastcourt.

He was joined later by others. Ambulances man a shuttle service, to a hospital at Ladysmith.

A specially chartered plane flew a supply of blood and serum from Durban to the hospital. — Associated Press.

Drummond Murder

New Arrest Made

Digne, France, Oct. 20.

The police today made a new arrest in the case of the murder of British food expert Sir Jack Drummond, his wife and 11-year-old daughter.

Sir Jack and his family were slain last August 6 while camping along a road in Southern France.

Officials who have been working on the case ever since took a 30-year-old metal worker, who lives near the scene of the triple slaying into custody at Avignon. There was no immediate charge filed.

This development followed an unconfirmed report that officers had finally learned the identity of the owner of the rifle used in the crime. Sir Jack and his wife were both shot while 11-year-old Elizabeth Drummond was clubbed to death with the rifle butt. — Associated Press.

The Ship Which Never Sailed
Dartmouth, Oct. 20. Research, the ship which never sailed, was towed from Dartmouth today to a Plymouth scrap yard where she will be broken up. Built by the Admiralty at a cost of £100,000 for magnetic survey work just before the war, the ship became obsolete and was replaced by a more modern scientific ship. She never left her moorings—until today—Reuter.

"Old Man" Hero In Korea War

Washington, Oct. 20. The army reported today that Lt. Col. William H. Isbell, Jr., was killed in action in Korea last Tuesday. There was just this bare announcement from the Pentagon. But behind it is one of the great individual dramatic stories of the Korean War. For, with the official report of his death, it becomes possible to identify Col. Isbell as the "Old Colonel" whose courage and death were reported in a memorable dispatch by Milo Farnell. Associated Press war correspondent, from the Korean front on Oct. 18. Farnell related that the colonel led an infantry charge on Triangle Hill, although it was not his job and, in the words of a captain, he "didn't have any damn business up there." The dispatch could not identify the colonel because censors hold up the name of a man who is killed. The army's policy is that next of kin must be notified before news reporters may use the name. So the name of Col. Isbell had to wait until official channels moved through army channels to his widow, Mrs. Marie Gwendolyn Isbell of Gambrell, Maryland, and his father, William H. Isbell of Russellville, Alabama. By army standards, Col. Isbell was an old man to be leading infantrymen up a gun-swept hill. But he was only 43. Army records list him as a native of Houston, Texas, born on March 21, 1907. (In Korea, the captain said he had a rebel flag and was going to pin it up there" on top of Triangle Hill.) Col. Isbell was a West Point graduate in the class of 1931. He attended Vanderbilt University before his selection for the military academy. During World War II, he served in the European theatre as a transportation officer. He was assigned to the Far East Command last February. Records here listed Col. Isbell as the Inspector-General of the 7th Infantry division—Associated Press.

Pakistan Gets Wheat Loan From America
Washington, Oct. 20. The State Department announced today that Pakistan was procuring $15,000,000 worth of United States wheat with funds lent by this country. The announcement said: "In order to negotiate procurements of United States wheat under the United States loan agreement with Pakistan, concluded in September 1952, a procurement authorization was signed by Pakistan and the United States, on Friday, October 17. A total of approximately $15,000,000 worth of wheat is being procured by the Government of Pakistan in the open market in the United States." The authorization was signed by Mohammed Iqbal, Commercial Secretary of the Pakistan Embassy here, and Mr. William Rowe, Director of Supplies and Requirements in the Technical Co-operation Administration—Reuter.

Yogi's Appeal
Colombo, Oct. 20. Swami Suddhananda Bharati, an Indian yogi, today appealed to the "material" yogis of the West and spiritual yogis of the East to unite and discover a way to save humanity from disaster. The yogi, who arrived here from Singapore yesterday after a spiritual mission to Japan, Indonesia, Thailand and Malaya, added that few Asian countries today had political stability and economic satisfaction. The Mayor of Colombo, Mr. C. T. Gero, accorded a civic reception to the yogi—Reuter.

United Nations, Oct. 20. Diplomatic efforts to find a solution of the disputes between France and Tunisia and Morocco got under way over the week-end, and Arab sources said it was not excluded that direct conversations between the Arab group and the French delegation may be held here soon. Neither party was prepared at this early stage to comment on the outlook of the informal mediatory efforts led by several key delegates, including Senhor Joao Carlos Muniz of Brazil, chairman of the powerful Political and Security Committee of the United Nations Assembly. Spokesmen for both parties described Senhor Muniz' endeavours as "very interesting".

A high diplomatic source told the United Press that Senhor Muniz and other self-appointed mediators were working along the lines of obtaining French and Arab-Asian agreement that the Assembly limit itself to a declaration expressing confidence in the ability of France and the two North African protectorates to resume negotiations and settle their differences. This, it was hoped, may meet Arab-Asian demands that the Assembly take some action on the festering African disputes.

Election Of Committee Officials

United Nations, Oct. 20. The Economic Committee of the General Assembly today elected Mr. Ernest Chaufet, of Haiti, as Vice-President, and Mr. Omar Halla, of Saudi Arabia, as Rapporteur. Among its main tasks the Committee will have to decide whether to create a special fund to help under-developed countries or whether to do this through existing agencies, such as the International Monetary Fund. The Committee will also discuss the reports of the United Nations Agent-General on Korean reconstruction. The Assembly's Budget Committee elected Mr. Finn Friis of Denmark as Vice-President and Mr. Keith Brennan of Australia Rapporteur. Two of the main problems before the Committee are the administrative reorganization of the United Nations and various Budget cuts proposed by the Advisory Committee on administrative and Budgetary questions—Reuter.

Court Sequel To Riots

Cairo, Oct. 20. Eighty-four members of the police auxiliary force—Bulak Nizam—were sentenced to hard labour terms by a military tribunal today for mutiny during Cairo's "Black Saturday" riots last January. Forty-seven were sentenced to five years in prison, committed by the Ministry of the Interior to two years, and the rest got three months. One hundred were acquitted. At daybreak on January 28 members of the Bulak Nizam broke out of their barracks to "avenge" auxiliary police involved in fighting with British troops in the Suez Canal zone—Reuter.

After opening the Exhibition, the Duke was presented with a scale-model of the frigate Maggie, his last command in the Mediterranean—Reuter.

Japanese Desire For Help

San Francisco, Oct. 20. The Japanese Ambassador to the U.S., Eiichi Araki, told a distinguished American audience tonight that "for material as well as security reasons it is to your interest to help Japan recover. For the same reasons, we want to recover. For the same reasons, we want to recover and stand on our own feet." Speaking at a dinner in his honour given by the Japan Society of San Francisco, Mr. Araki said Japan wants to be relieved of the burdens placed upon her by the war as soon as possible. "You see in the new Japan— which you have done much to democratize— a nation that can and will stand with you in the maintenance of law and order, of welfare and liberty. This is one reason why you are helping us recover our stability. "And because we Japanese see in the United States the hope of the world for peace among men, we welcome and warmly grasp the hand of friendship you have offered us." Mr. Araki said Japan today buys more US products than do all other Asian nations combined and there is more mutual advantage to this trade than ever before. Japan, cut off from the supplies and markets of China, is largely dependent upon the U.S. for both, he said. At the same time, he said, America needs and wants markets. The Korean war made Japanese production especially particularly important to the American armed forces—United Press.

NORTH KOREA DEMAND

United Nations, Oct. 20. The North Korean Foreign Minister, Mr. Pak Honyen, has demanded that North Korean representatives take part in the discussion of the Korean question by the Assembly. In a cable to Mr. Lester Pearson, of Canada, the Assembly President, he declared North Korea would regard as illegal any decisions on Korea taken in their absence. He said that it was "essential to hear the representatives of the Korean people" on atrocities, bombings of peaceful populations and "illegal methods of bacterial warfare."—Reuter.

RUSSIA SUBMITS The "Proof"

United Nations, Oct. 20. Russia today submitted to the United Nations General Assembly a 60-page document giving alleged facts about bacterial warfare in Korea and China. Among bacteria said to have been dropped in Korea and China were flies, spiders, mites, mosquitoes, plant fungus and rodent animals—Reuter.

Bevan Expected To Climb Down

"Technical Victory" For Attlee

London, Oct. 20. Mr. Aneurin Bevan and his supporters were preparing tonight to concede a technical victory in their tussle with the official Labour leadership.

The Labour leader, Mr. Clement Attlee, and the leadership will ask the Party Parliamentary Group at a meeting on Thursday to present Mr. Bevan with an ultimatum, which proposes:

1. The immediate abandonment of all group organisations in the party, except those officially recognised and.

2. That all members refrain from attacks on each other in Parliament, the Press or on the platform.

Mr. Attlee will stake his leadership on this ultimatum which the Bevanites will oppose. If, as is generally expected, they are outvoted, they are likely to accept the situation.

"They will continue what they call 'Socialist education' inside the party but their Parliamentary Group meetings would end."

UNIONIST'S ATTACK

Some leading Bevanites do not see the resolution as making any difference to the internal conflict.

When they meet tomorrow they will throw the meeting open to the whole Labour Party.

But they do not usually discuss tactics at these meetings within Parliament.

Mr. Tom Williamson, General Secretary of the 880,000-strong Union of General and Municipal Workers and a former member of the Labour Executive, tonight attacked the left wingers in his union's journal.

He wrote: "A disgruntled group of ambitious individuals have been organising within the party, and have succeeded in forming a recalcitrant faction which seriously threatens to undermine the unity and the stability of the movement."

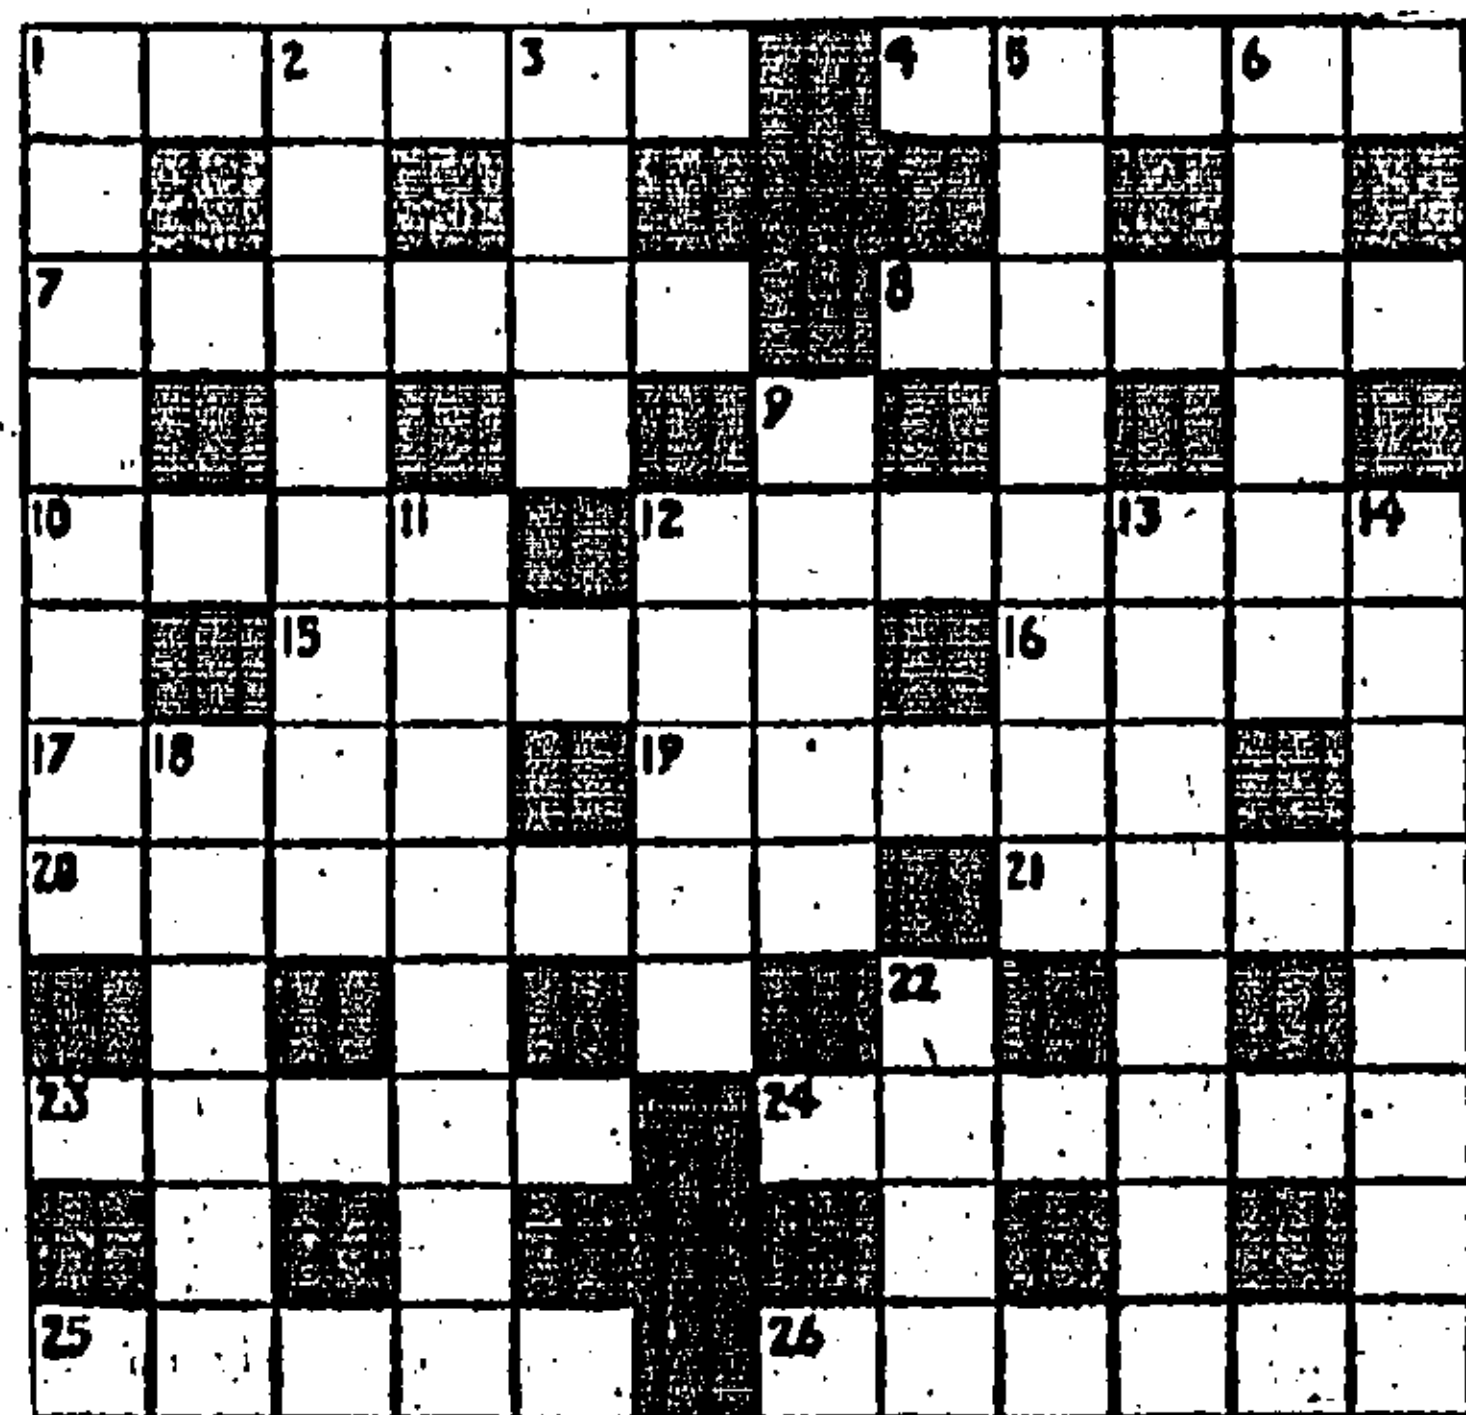

He said: "The trade union movement cannot stand aside and ignore what is taking place."—Reuter.

CANADIAN AIM

Vancouver, Oct. 20. Mr. Douglas Abbott, Canadian Finance Minister, said today that Canada would strive for agreement on a realistic solution to the Sterling Area crisis when Commonwealth Ministers meet in London next month.

"What we all want to see is a healthy expanding trade on a firm and reliable base with these countries, which for so long were regarded as our principal market as well as an important source of supply," he said.—Reuter.

Rising Clamour Over European Army Treaty

STORM ALARMS BONN

Bonn, Oct. 20.

West German and American officials here are alarmed by the political storm in France over the European army treaty.

They said the rising clamour in France against the participation of German troops in Europe's defence comes at a critical time for the Chancellor, Konrad Adenauer, staunch advocate of German co-operation with the West.

The 76-year-old Chancellor faces the battle of his political life next week when the Bonn Parliament is to debate ratification of the European army treaty and the related Allied-West German peace contract, these officials said.

The powerful opposition Socialists have proclaimed a fight to the finish against these agreements for European integration and armed alliance.

Geneva, Oct. 20.

Evidence before the United Nations Committee on forced labour today alleged that the number of labour camps in Czechoslovakia had risen from 87 last year to 371 this month.

There were similar increases in Rumania and Hungary, it was said.

The Committee heard evidence on the growth of forced labour camps in Eastern Europe submitted by the International Federation of Free Journalists, which claims a membership of 1,200 escaped or exiled newspapermen from Eastern Europe.

The Federation alleged that economic plans forced on Communist countries by Russia caused the constant growth of forced labour camps.

Many prisoners had been sentenced for infringement of production "norms", it said.

Polish journalist Boleslaw Wierzbanski told reporters after giving evidence that a map of Poland, giving the sites of 74 labour camps containing about 150,000 prisoners, had been submitted to the Committee.—Reuter.

Eisenhower Off On Tour Of New England

New York, Oct. 20.

The Republican presidential candidate, Mr. Dwight Eisenhower, climbed aboard his campaign train today—15 days before the polling—for a week's tour of New England, where President Truman raised Democratic hopes with a series of fighting speeches last week.

At the first stop at Stamford, Connecticut—where Mr. Truman spoke on Saturday—several thousand people turned out in the snow.

TAKING A HAND IN DISPUTE

London, Oct. 20.

The Food Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, told the House of Commons today that the Government was dealing with the refusal of Hull and Grimsby trawler owners to give facilities for landing fish from Icelandic fishing vessels.

Replying to a question he said it would not be in the general interest to make a statement at present.

"As long as the trawler owners keep within what they are legally entitled to do, the Government cannot interfere," he added.

Mrs. Bessie Braddock, Labour member, had protested against this refusal saying that "this action has deprived Britain of about £250,000 worth of fish."

A Conservative member, Mr. Richard Law, said the action of the trawler owners had the overwhelming support of fishermen whose livelihood had been threatened by Iceland's decision.

Mr. Law said that Iceland's action in closing certain waters to British and other trawlers "had created a major problem in International Law."—Reuter.

Import Quota Rejected

Washington, Oct. 20.

President Truman today rejected a Tariff Commission recommendation for the imposition of a quota limitation on imports of shelled, salted nuts. The country most concerned is Turkey.

President Truman said he did not believe there was or is likely to be any severe threat to American interests to warrant new restrictions on imports for the coming crop year.

Restrictive action, he said, would interfere with the emergency efforts to combat the serious Turkish financial crisis. It would fall almost entirely upon Turkey and reduce its annual dollar earnings by more than $1,000,000. This would be an "unjustified loss of dollar earnings already incurred due to increased tariff on dried figs."—Reuter.

Casey Does Some Plain Speaking To Soviet Russia

INTEREST IN DISCONTENT

United Nations, Oct. 20.

The Australian Minister for External Affairs, Mr. Richard G. Casey, told the Soviet Union in the General Assembly today that Russia had nothing to fear from the recently-formed Pacific Alliance.

Mr. Casey spoke directly to the Soviet delegation in the front row near the rostrum.

Heading the delegation was M. Andrei Gromyko in the absence of M. Andrei Vyshinsky, the Foreign Minister.

Mr. Casey said Soviet Russia had a "vested interest in discontent."

Russia had never offered technical aid to the rest of the world except for "obviously self-interested political purposes in limited areas."

"Mr. Vyshinsky seemed to find some satisfaction in the face of a world shortage of food—and yet Soviet Russia has made no effort to help. We, the Democracies, have made every effort to help," Mr. Casey said.

Australia could grow substantially more food for the world if it were not for lack of capital.

"Faster development would be possible if the present heavy burden of rearmament forced on us by the threat of Communist aggression were lifted," Mr. Casey said.

ENDURING ANVIL

Referring directly to M. Vyshinsky's speech last Saturday, Mr. Casey said: "Clearly it is the Soviet aim to attempt to drive a wedge between Great Britain and the United States. If this is so, there are a lot of us who have an interest in the matter."

"British-American co-operation is an anvil that has worn out many hammers. It will stand up to a sledge as well."

On Korea, Mr. Casey said Australia had full confidence in the United Nations armistice negotiators and stood firmly by them.

He added: "United Nations efforts to achieve an armistice have been constant. Our negotiators have gone to the limit in an effort to reach agreement. If the Communists sincerely wish peace—as the world understands the word peace—the door is open."

On criticism of Colonial countries, Mr. Casey said there were dangers in the premature granting of self-government.

Some of the countries which criticised "Colonialism" had social services far inferior to those of certain trust territories, he added.—Reuter.

Singer Pursues Rita Hayworth

Madrid, Oct. 20.

Rita Hayworth refused to see an American singer, Robert Savage, who flew here today saying he was "madly in love" with her.

He said he had walked off a film set in America to fly to Europe to meet her. He is 40. Miss Hayworth, now in Seville, her father's birthplace, telephoned her secretary: "I do not want to see Savage."

But Savage said: "I shall go to Seville to see her if she does not return."

He said he first met Miss Hayworth in 1947 and saw her a few months ago. He said his real name is Robert Cimbo.—Reuter.

Arab Protest Delegation

Bonn, Oct. 20.

An Arab League delegation, expected here to protest against the West German-Israeli compensation agreement, has asked to be received at the West German Foreign Ministry tomorrow.

The delegation will be led by Adnan Drjic, Lebanese Envoy in Paris. They are expected to propose that the question of compensation to Israel should be referred to the United Nations.

West German officials are confident that the delegation will not delay parliamentary ratification of compensation agreement. Some right-wing free Democrats and German party members have expressed apprehension about the strong Arab reaction but the Christian Democrats and the opposition Social Democrats support the Government on this issue.—Reuter.

Russian Grain For Britain

London, Oct. 20.

The Food Minister, Mr. Lloyd George, questioned about the new Anglo-Soviet grain contract, told the House of Commons today that Britain had bought "all the Russians were prepared to offer at this stage."

He was replying to Mr. Frederick Willey, Labour member, who asked why the new Anglo-Soviet grain contract provided for the delivery of only 200,000 tons of Soviet grain compared with 1,000,000 tons under the previous agreement.—Reuter.

Miners Refuse To Work

Pittsburg, Oct. 20.

More than half of America's 375,000 soft coal miners refused to work today in protest against the Government—ordered cut in the $1.00 daily wage increase they recently won from the industry.

About 227,500 miners remained idle, while the Wage Stabilisation Board reconsidered the increase.

Mr. John L. Lewis, the miners' president, signed a contract with soft coal operators last month calling for the increase, but the Wage Stabilisation Board ruled on Saturday that the miners were only entitled to a daily rise of $1.50.

Most miners considered this action nullified their contract.—Reuter.

Prince's Funds "Frozen"

Cairo, Oct. 20.

The Egyptian authorities have refused a request by Prince Mohamed Aly, cousin of ex-king Farouk and former Heir Presumptive to the Egyptian Throne, for a monthly transfer of £2500 (about $318 Sterling) from his funds in Egypt.

Prince Mohamed Aly is undergoing a rest cure at Leuvenne-Cuchy, Switzerland.

The Egyptian authorities rejected the request on the grounds that the Prince left Egypt on September 15 in "normal health conditions" and could have put off his trip.

They further said that Prince Mohamed Aly had transferred £100,000 in hard currency under a previous government.—Reuter.

Perhaps you were surprised to hear Malenkov talk of corruption . . .

SPIVS IN HIGH PLACES

Stockholm. WHERE best can the spiv prosper? Not, it appears, in the Old Kent Road; not in Manhattan; not in Rome or Paris—but way beyond the Iron Curtain, in the heart of Russia.

Even Georgi Malenkov, the tough man who rose high in the Kremlin through his ruthless "purges" in the party, has had to get up before the Communist Congress in Moscow and inveigh against widespread corruption in the Soviet Union.

One man has just underlined Malenkov's words by showing how easy it is to glean much illicit cash from the great world of Sovietised trade.

It is true he is now in gaol, serving 25 years. But it is equally true that he proved, over years as a confidence trickster, that when it comes to finding the mug there is no easier game than the highly centralised, highly bureaucratised Communist State.

Nicolaï Feodorovich Timofeev is a smart operator by any spiv standard, and he found plenty of willing helpers in high places in the Soviet hierarchy of commerce.

NO CARD . . .

CONSIDER his career of crime. He had no references. He did not even have, apparently, the all-important party card.

But he was able to do these things in the Russian Socialist Federal Soviet Republic, the part of Russia that includes Moscow.

IT IS EASY FOR A BOSS IN RUSSIA . . .

by RALPH HEWINS

HE worked as a "qualified engineer" at an assembly plant and left with £1,000 from the kitty.

HE turned up a fortnight later at a chemical plant and was appointed chief engineer. They gave him a furnished house. He had to leave that in a hurry, because the local police began asking why he did not have an identity card.

HE moved on and became departmental manager of a forestry trust. After a month he was on his travels again, richer by £3,650 "borrowed" from the trust.

TOOK KITTY

BY now Nicolaï Feodorovich Timofeev was becoming a little tired of the travelling life and he retired for a rest to a health resort by the Black Sea, where Stalin and the favoured members of the Politburo go to relax.

There he had a fine time, swimming and sunbathing. It lasted for several months, until the need for a change and the need for more money sent him into the hush-hush area of the Ural.

He went to the State Meat and Milk Products Trust. The spiv-tough worked. He got a job as chief engineer of a dairy plant. He stayed there for just one month. It was quite long enough for him to find out where the kitty was. When he left the trust was short of £3,250.

So to Central Russia. He added a high-powered job with another trust in the town of Pskov. "Unfortunately," says a Russian report, "the job he got did not fall in with his taste and so he felt constrained to leave as fast as possible with only the trifling sum of £800."

He did not lose his touch. He became an executive in a building office. That pleased him, for he was able to leave with £2,800 after only two months.

He was by no means finished. In fact his greatest coup was to come. For he duped the managing director of one of the party's strongholds—the Co-operative Building Trust of the Russian Republic.

A job was waiting. Would Nicolaï Feodorovich Timofeev care to build grain elevators in a country district?

Nicolaï was delighted to accept. He was more delighted when, within a few weeks, he left the area with £3,750 which did not belong to him.

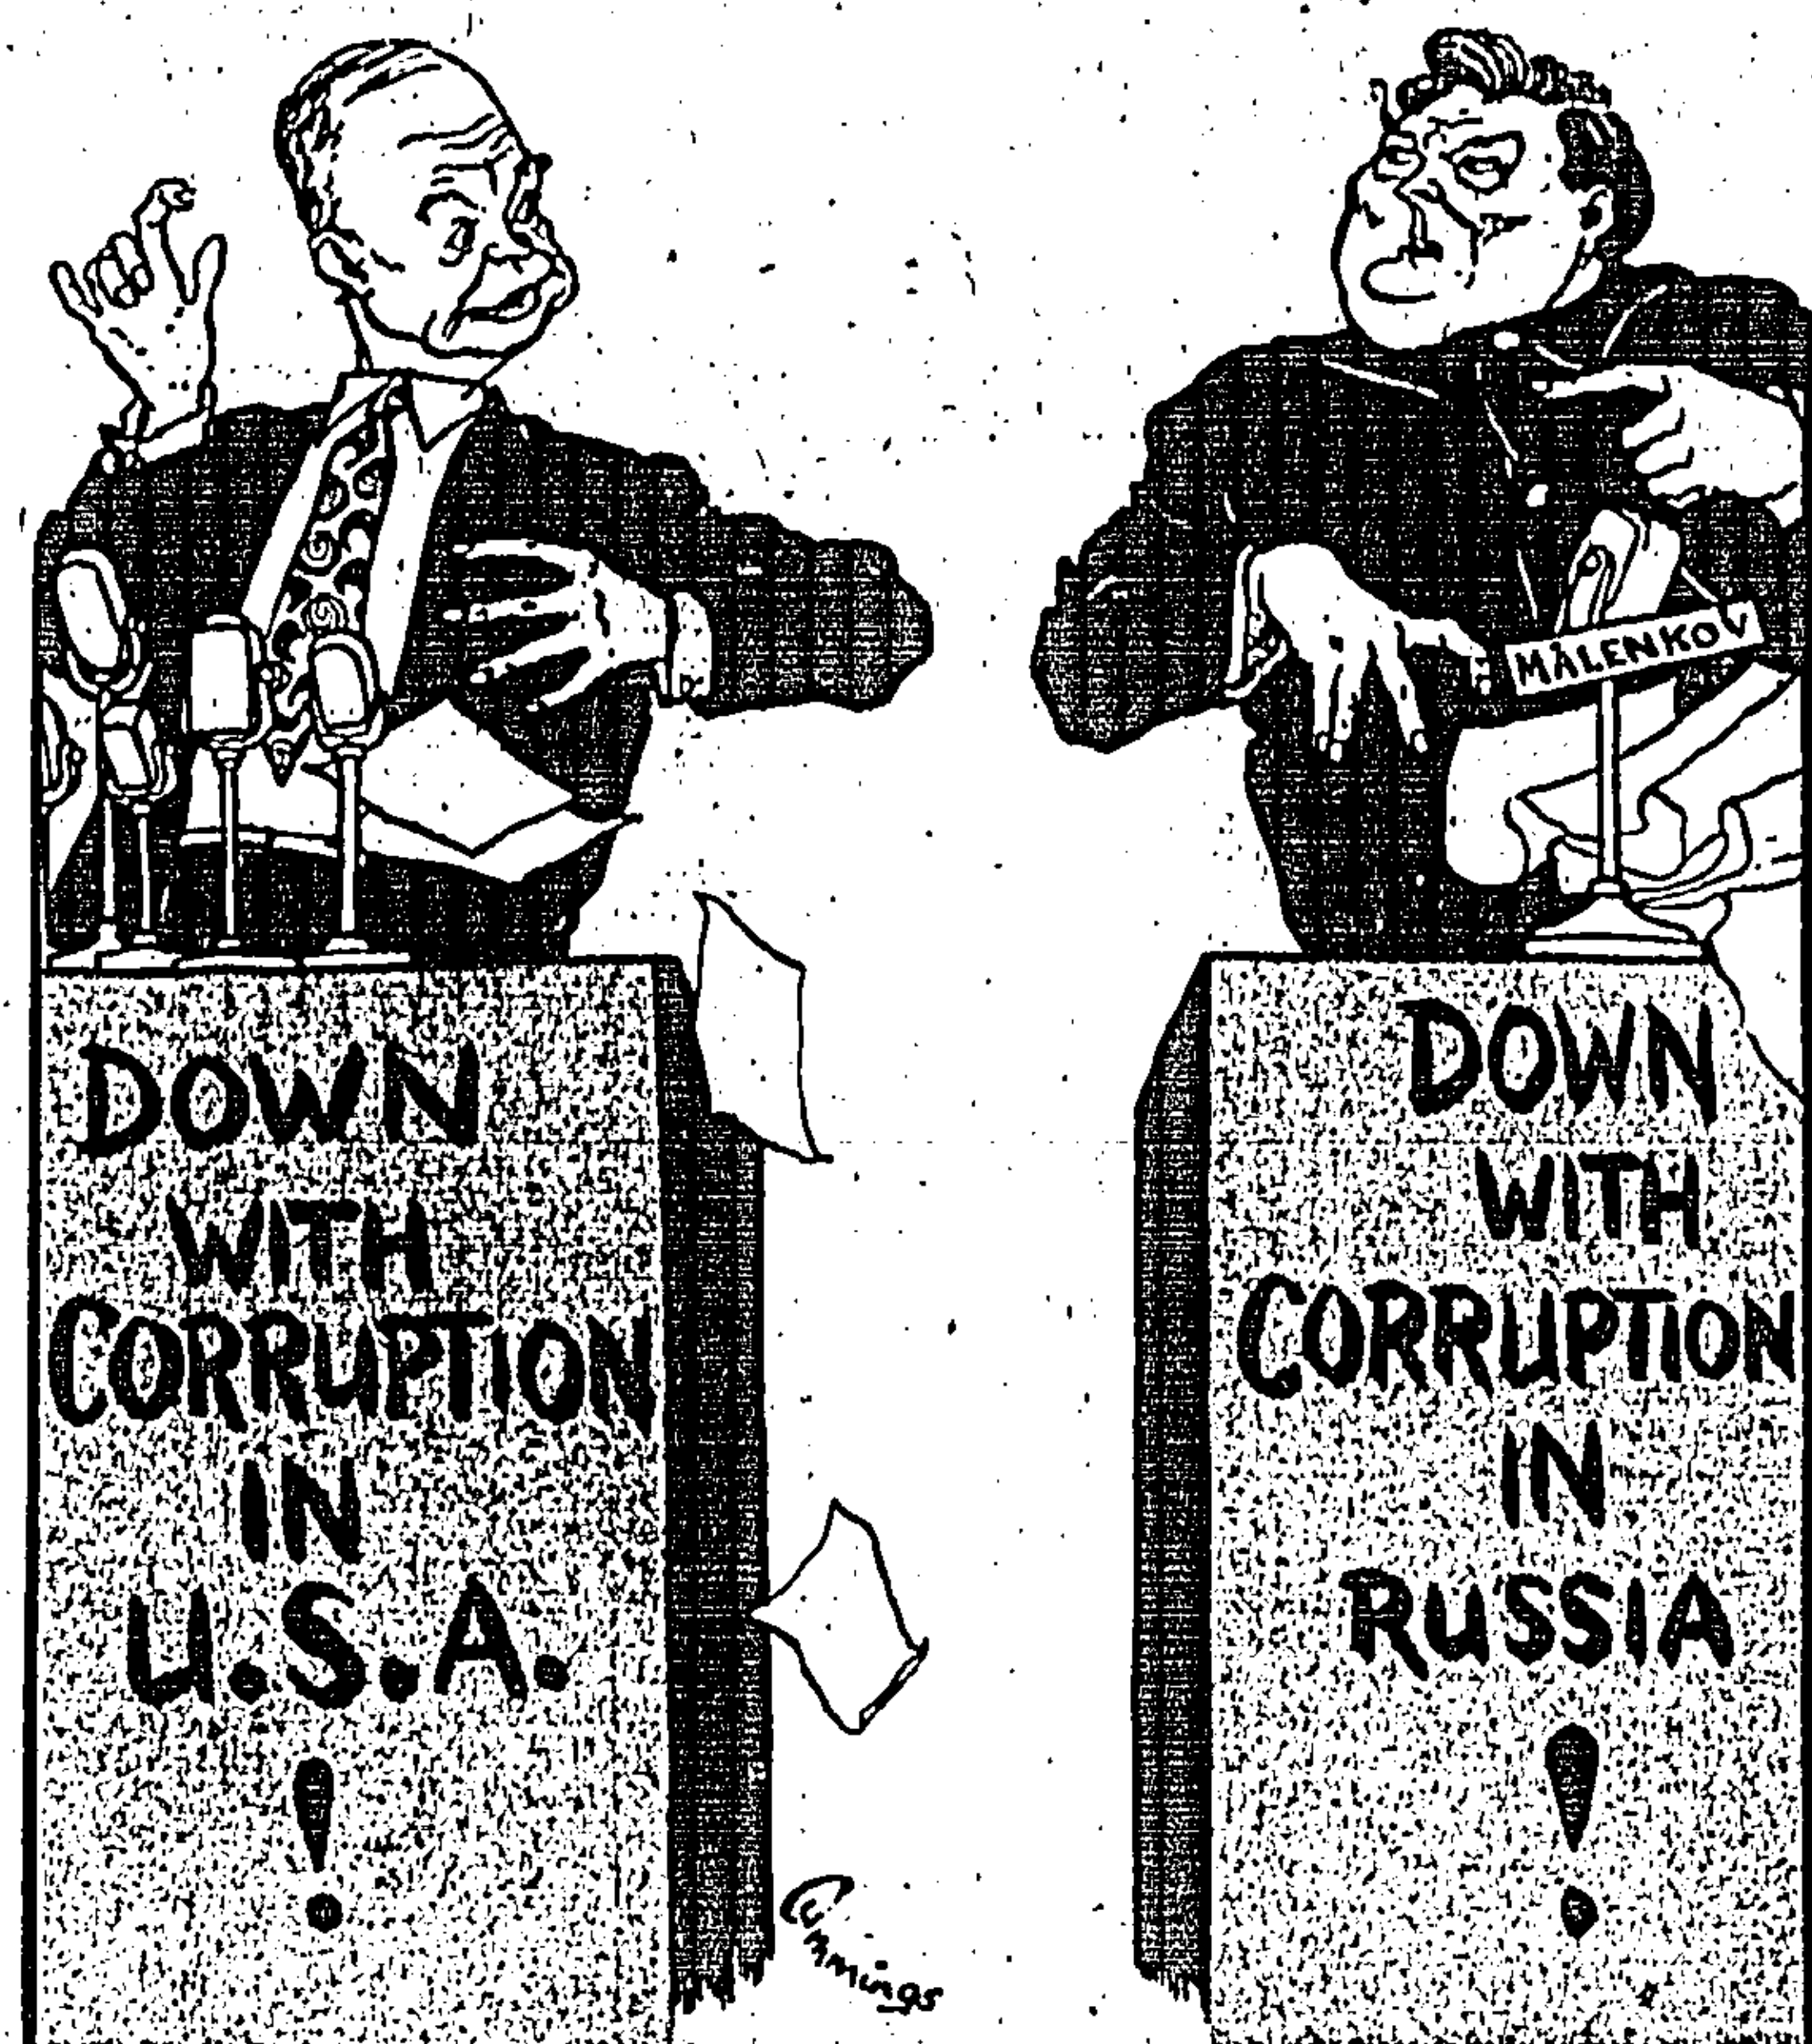

WEAK SPOTS

NOW where did all this information come from? Why, from the Soviet newspapers, most reticent of the world's Press when it comes to crime reporting.

But the leading Communist newspaper Pravda, the leading Communist satirical magazine Crocodile, the important trade journal Engineer had to expose Timofeev before other spivs could in.

For it was not only Timofeev. There were the directors of the enterprises he swindled. They, too, have been pilloried as a dreadful warning to all who might be tempted to use their power to line their pockets.

There are many such, quick to seize on the weak spots of the Soviet bureaucracy. So many that a campaign started against corruption throughout Russia. Party purges followed in Georgia, supervised by secret police chief Beria. Malenkov's speech shows the campaign has not yet succeeded. The spiv in Russia is still a skilful customer.

THE WOMAN WHO WAITS WAITED ANOTHER YEAR

By EVELYN IRONS

Frinton-on-Sea. IN a semi-detached stucco house in Pole-harn Lane, Frinton-on-Sea, a slim, blonde woman with weary eyes waits for a message that may never come. She has waited nearly three years.

The woman is Mrs Winifred Sanders, whose husband, Edgar Sanders, Britain's forgotten man, will on November 22 enter his fourth year in a Hungarian gaol. The news she awaits, in vain is the news of his release.

November 22, 1949, was the date when Sanders, now 46, employed by the American-owned International Telephone and Telegraph Company, was arrested in the street in Budapest with his boss, American-born Robert Vogeler.

Tried as spies

Both were tried as spies in February 1950 and sentenced to long terms of imprisonment. The American State Department immediately began to bargain for Vogeler, whose sentence was 15 years, and got him out after 527 days' imprisonment, by granting certain trade and radio concessions to the Hungarians. Sanders, the Briton, savagely sentenced to 13 years in prison, is still in a Communist gaol. No British representative has been allowed to communicate with him since his arrest.

In his book "It Was Stalin's Prisoner," just published, Robert Vogeler, now in America, describes the mental tortures used by the Hungarian Communists to extract his false confession of espionage before the court. He says that Sanders was picked as a bogus spy for propaganda purposes against British imperialism.

Already the Foreign Office had stated that much of Sanders' supposed confession to the Hungarian court was complete nonsense and that the names of those he mentioned as being implicated were people who did not exist.

Mrs Sanders said: "I still cannot see the point of my husband's imprisonment from the Hungarians' point of view. Still less can I see why the British look on helplessly while an innocent Englishman lies for years in a Hungarian gaol."

Letter to Eden

"Some months ago I wrote personally to Mr. Eden asking him if nothing could be done to get my husband back."

"He wrote me a personal letter in reply. He was very kind and sympathetic, but he said that everything possible was already being done for my husband's release. It seems that we are not in a position to bargain like the Americans."

Mrs Sanders went on: "It is humiliating that a British citizen can be left to suffer in a foreign country all this time without any intervention from his own country."

She has written several letters to her husband, but they have not been returned or answered.

Recently she has stopped writing because, she says, it is evidently useless. In despair Mrs Sanders went to the Hungarian Legation in London to appeal for news of her husband.

"The Minister was polite," she said, "but he said he knew nothing about the case. When I asked whether, if my husband had died or was seriously ill, I would be told of it, he said

"You will definitely be informed." Mrs Sanders's three daughters, Barbara (18 next month), Yvonne, 16, and 11-year-old schoolgirl Denise, last saw their father in Vienna just over three years ago.

Barbara now lives in a girls' hostel in Earl's Court, and works at the Admiralty. Yvonne, an attractive blue-eyed brunette, who has just left school, wants to study beauty culture in Paris. She has just returned from a five-week holiday in Aix-les-Bains as the guest of a French family who wrote sympathising with the Sanders in their anxiety.

No politics

Mrs Sanders said that her husband's "confession" to the Budapest court that he was a spy was "fantastic and absurd."

"He was never interested in politics," she said. "In his spare time he did gardening and wood work. He was interested in sport, played tennis and swam."

"He would be the last man in the world to be mixed up in spying."

Mrs Sanders receives £20 a month from her husband's arm, but she has to work to keep her home and family going. A telephonist before her marriage, she took a job as a waitress in Frinton, but has given this up.

Now she has taken a three years' rental of a beach tea and ice-cream kiosk on the sands at Walton-on-the-Naze, near her home. Recently she closed it for the season. "September was a very bad month for seaside business."

At her home at New Malden, Surrey, Miss Dagmar Sanders, older sister of Edgar, said: "All letters I have written to my brother have been returned through the Foreign Office. They included one telling him that our 76-year-old father had died."

Long anxiety

"The prolonged anxiety is terrible. I keep on pestering the Foreign Office about my brother's case. They do not tell me what they are doing to secure his release, but they say they are making repeated efforts."

"I expect they are doing their best, but it is ghastly to think of my brother's sufferings meanwhile."

I asked the Foreign Office what they were doing about Edgar Sanders. An official referred me to two Foreign Office statements in Parliament, one in the House of Commons on February 20, in reply to a question by Mr. Harman.

Nicholls, MP, and the other in the House of Lords on March 4 in reply to Lord Vansittart.

Asked what had been done between then and now to press the Hungarians to free Sanders, the spokesman said: "I must refer you to these statements. But it must not be concluded that no steps are being taken."

The Mafia's New Purge

By Frederick Cook

New York. THE Mafia—the Sicilian Black Hand Society who terrorised Italian-Americans in the 1920's—are on the march again.

Warfare has broken out in the underworld, with a new generation of young killers apparently dedicated to wiping out all traces of the Old Guard and taking over their rackets.

That is the conclusion of police and FBI authorities in the wake of a series of gangland killings, capped by the disappearance of Big Sam Zannino, well-known boxing promoter of Baltimore.

For many months, the string of murders were not seen by the authorities as part of a pattern. But now they are, as a result of a conference at Syracuse, New York, attended by homicide detectives from three cities and 14 delegates from Mr. J. Edgar Hoover's G-men in Washington.

A list of 18 unsolved New York murders was presented to the conference by a detective from Brooklyn. Almost all the victims had police records going back years. Almost all were in their 50's and 60's.

At Baltimore, where "Big Sam's" disappearance quickly followed the finding of the body of his friend, Nino Messina, authorities are also convinced that the outbreak of murder is the work of "a combine."

Messina, whose source of wealth was a mystery to the police, was identified after his death as the man sought for years at Syracuse for a triple murder in 1925.

His body, riddled with bullets, was found in a trunk in a car parked on a Baltimore street.

A few days later Zannino vanished. Then, a few days later still—Zannino's luxury car was found at Wilmington, Delaware, and bore bloodstains.

Said Colonel Beverly Ober, Police Commissioner of Baltimore: "Messina's death was no locally-inspired killing but had its roots in an inter-State crime ring."

For years, police sought them, and a third man wanted for the same crime, Phil Mangano. A detective even went to Sicily in search of them.

The FBI came into the case when it was found that the bloodstained car driven by "Big Sam" had been stolen last May in New York.

Now in New York the police have been confronted by two more murders, believed to be linked with the Harlem drugs racket.

Basilio Pulitta, aged 52, a bartender, was found gassed on the edge of Harlem, no far from the Franklin D. Roosevelt Drive.

John Garcia, aged 54, also a bartender, staggered from the hallway of a six-storey tenement in Harlem screaming in Spanish, "Somebody killed me!" and died on the footpath.

People in the apartment house swore they had never seen him before. In neither case was robbery the motive. Each man's body had on it a fair sum of money.

But Pulitta, a mild-mannered even timid, little man had been a chance witness to the fatal shooting of Walter Forlenza, aged 33, in an all-night restaurant last February—and the police know the "rubbing out" of key witnesses is an accepted part of Mafia tactics.

About Garcia, little has been discovered.

The police and FBI men believe that the trail they are following leads back to a mass killing of 27 years ago, in a little Italian restaurant at Syracuse.

It was on a Sunday afternoon and a card game was in progress. Around the table sat Jimmy Blumiz, 31, Toni Zangari, 22, and Carlo Sinigelli, 22. The door swung open and Nino Messina, then in his 20s, walked in, supported by his friend Battista Pelletti.

It was the perfect Hollywood setting. Guns blazed and all three card players fell dead. Nino and his friend fled.

For years, police sought them, and a third man wanted for the same crime, Phil Mangano. A detective even went to Sicily in search of them.

The police never caught up with them, but someone did. Pelletti was found dead with a bullet in his head at Syracuse in 1927. Phil Mangano, grown to be a front rank Brooklyn racketeer and a lieutenant in the Joe Adonis gang, was found dead a little over a year ago in a Harlem swamp. He, too, had been riddled with bullets.

And Nino Messina—longest-lived of the hunted trio—was found murdered in Baltimore the other week.

The police are satisfied that the blood which stained "Big Sam's" Zannino's stolen car was of the same type as Messina's. They reason that Messina was killed in Zannino's car. What they would like to know now is: "Where is Big Sam? And is he alive or dead?"

The British-run Nuffield Foundation, that spends more than £200,000 a year on philanthropy has brought out its yearly report.

It shows that the 34 men and women who help administer the funds keep their own expenses low.

They work out at 1s. 10d. in every 20s. they spend.

Now the six-year-old foundation is the same age as Unesco (the "International Union of Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organisation").

But the Unescans, with headquarters in Paris and more than £3,000,000 a year, keep back for themselves something like 17s. of every 20s. they have to spend.

The 1940 Unescans— from directors to messengers—got their money from 60 nations.

British taxpayers have contributed £340,000 this year.

The last Unesco budget shows where its money goes.

First of all, it earmarks £2,000,000 for tax-free salaries, hospitality allowances, cost-of-living adjustments, travel allowances, staff welfare.

Then there are the headquarters expenses.

Example: £480 a year for carpet maintenance. Of the 3s. in every £2 left over the Unescans earmark money for their good causes. For example:

£4,500 for a 60-day meeting of experts in Paris to discuss a new history of mankind.

£2,000 for a 12-day working party in Africa to compare English and African languages.

The Unescans are quick to defend themselves against criticism. They insist that nobody can measure the benefits of their kind of work in terms of pounds, shillings, and pence.

But British taxpayers have good reason to question the results of Unesco's good works. With 17s. in the £2 take-off good works are good business.

It costs so much to spend the money

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Tourneys Will Give One Many Thrills

By OSWALD JACOBY

THE national championships being held by the American Contract Bridge League in Cincinnati remind me of one of the most dramatic hands of last year's tournament. The hero was Alan P. Harvey, Jr., of Cincinnati, a member of the team that landed second in the contest for the national team championship.

The bidding was reasonably normal for a closely contested team match. West started with a 12-4-2-3, and North, after a brief search, bid 1N.T. Harvey, playing the South hand, decided to enter the bidding with a 12-4-2-3, and North, after a brief search, bid 1N.T. Harvey, playing the South hand, decided to enter the bidding with a 12-4-2-3, and North, after a brief search, bid 1N.T.

West opened the king of diamonds and continued the suit, hoping that dummy would be embarrassed by the small amount of diamonds in his hand. Harvey, playing the South hand, decided to enter the bidding with a 12-4-2-3, and North, after a brief search, bid 1N.T.

At the third trick, Harvey returned a low trump from dummy, allowing West to take his king. West promptly returned a second trump, and this time around to declarer's hand.

Now South could lead a spade from his own hand, and finish with dummy's jack. East could win with dummy's jack.

the ace of spades, but was unable to defeat the contract. When it came to the diamond suit, Harvey ruffed and cashed the top clubs and the king of spades.

Declarer then ruffed a spade in his own hand, to win the last two tricks with the high trump and the last club.

When this hand was played at the other table the declarer ruffed the second diamond with a low trump, and tackled the trump suit by laying down the ace and queen. West took the king of hearts and led a third trump, after which South was unable to make his contract. The declarer then took the king of spades and a second diamond trick.

£1,000 FOR A CHAMPION

HE MUST BE TOUGH, MUST PACK A WALLOP, MUST BE WILLING TO LEARN

It is 50 years since the world heavyweight crown was British property, safeguarded by Bob Fitzsimmons, the small freckle-faced Cornishman. But the search for a new 'hope' still holds a certain fascination—or is it morbid curiosity—for the British fight fan.

That is why more than usual interest is being taken in the latest plans of London promoter Jack Solomons to find a boxer to beat Rocky Marciano for the world title.

A few months ago Jack laid a bet of £1 against £2,000 with a well-known bookmaker, that he would find a British-born World Heavyweight Champion. And he promised the £1,000 to the successful exponent of the noble art.

A STAGE FURTHER

Now, Solomons has gone one stage further. He has brought out a scheme which will not only assist any aspiring Marciano on the road to fame, but will also line a few pockets in the process.

Solomons has inaugurated a £1,000 heavyweight competition for novices. Not only has he doubled the prize money previously offered in such competitions but he has organised it on a much wider scale than anything before.

The usual practice has been for all would-be world beaters to show their talents in a London gymnasium. Then from a list of perhaps 20 or 30 the most likely eight are picked out.

This time, however, Solomons has organised a national show. Promoters all over the country are to stage qualifying competitions which it is hoped will attract over 300 entries. These will then be whittled down to the required eight, who will fight it out at Harringway on December 10.

Jack Gardner won a novice's competition in December, 1948, and within two years he was British and Empire Champion. Four months later he added the European title to his collection. But that is as far as he went. No world honours came his way.

ONE BETTER?

What of the winner of the present competition? Can he go one better than ex-Guardsman Jack and capture the world title?

However much one may wish for his success, the chance; it must be admitted, is slim.

Nevertheless it is there. If the winner is tough, packs a wallop, and is willing to learn, he can make the grade. For such is the stuff which makes Champions.

Don't forget, it was not until July, 1948, that hunger drove Rocky Marciano, a part-time labourer, into the ring. Just over four years later he was World Champion. Why? He was tough, he packed a wallop, he was willing to learn.

A Sports Council To License And Control TV Relays Is The Answer To This Row

A Sports Council to license and control TV relays of big sporting events may be the answer to the copyright row which is keeping national spectacles off the British television screens.

Such a council would represent organised sport, the BBC, the film industry, and the public.

It might be given power to decide that certain national events shall be televised in the public interest.

It could license big-screen TV in cinemas to show broadcasts of the Derby, the Grand National, and football and boxing matches and divide the fees among the promoters.

The idea is likely to be discussed at talks between Earl de la Warr, the Postmaster-General, and leading sports promoters. A report by the Board of Trade Copyright Committee last week recommends the establishment of a "broadcaster's copyright."

This would allow the BBC to collect fees on behalf of the promoters for the public showing of televised events—in hotels, clubs, and public houses—while allowing the private TV set owner to look in for his £2 a year licence.

In this way, it is thought, promoters would receive more than the BBC is able or willing to pay.

The Committee's suggestion that the BBC should collect fees for relaying TV sport is not likely to please the association for the Protection of Copyright in Sport, whose Executive Committee will meet soon to discuss the report.

NO MACHINERY

Nor is it likely that the proposal will commend itself to the BBC—which has no experience in commercial production of this kind, and no machinery with which to do it.

Both sides, however, might well agree to assign their rights to a TV Sport Council in the same way that the Performing Rights Society collects music royalties for composers.

Mr F. S. Gentle, Vice-Chairman of the Association, said: "We are pleased that the committee thinks we have something which should be protected—but we are not pleased at the suggestion that the BBC should negotiate fees on our behalf. That is ridiculous."

Eddie Leadbeater To Play In League Cricket

London, Oct. 20.

Eddie Leadbeater, Yorkshire leg-break bowler and right-hand batsman, who was released by his county club at the end of last season, is to play League cricket next summer.

Leadbeater has signed a two-year contract with Royston Central Lancashire League side, starting from next April.

Several counties were interested in securing Leadbeater's signature, including Hampshire.

He first played for Yorkshire in 1949 and last winter was flown to India as replacement for Rhodes of Derbyshire.—Reuter.

DR. RHEE SAYS

JUDO IS SPLENDID TRAINING FOR DIPLOMACY

By SYDNEY SMITH

Paris, Oct. 14.

A United Nations diplomat, a nephew of South Korean President Syngman Rhee, 52-year-old Dr Hanho Rhee, gave a Judo demonstration with his 27-year-old blonde Swiss wife, Margot, under the floodlights of a popular all-in wrestling stadium and dance-hall off the Champs-Elysees tonight.

There was a hot dog stand in the foyer—and a good deal of hooting in the hall—but Dr Rhee, holder of the seventh Dan, and a descendant of the Emperors of Korea, starred to a full and enthusiastic house.

He began by throwing a number of Dutch, French and Swiss youths who looked twice his size until the sound of falls became almost monotonous. Weighing only 155lb himself, he then threw young international enthusiasts with deft ease, and afterwards, unmoved, explained to the uninitiated audience: "I use only their own force to put them down."

THE HIGHLIGHT

Highlight of the evening was the Judo demonstration which the doctor gave with his own pretty, fragile wife—25 years his junior.

He charged at her...he swung at her...he tried to kick her...he swung himself at her with hands and feet flying...he tried to butt and scratch her.

Every time, with a sweet smile and to the roaring applause of the smoke-filled galleries, young Mrs Rhee responded with the counter throw—and the doctor was on his back on the mat.

Said Dr Rhee—proud of his pupil, who is one of only five women in Europe who have attained a Black Belt: "She has the right rhythm needed to counter an opponent."

HOW TO BE GALLANT ON £20

By Hossell Tiltman

Tokyo, Oct. 12.
The recent visit to Japan of the Oxford Rugby team has been the occasion for the rediscovery by the Japanese of the "English gentleman."

From time to time the Japanese tend to write letters to their newspapers extolling the "gentlemanly qualities" and "cultured behaviour" of the average Englishman. But he avoids pushing on trains and buses and invariably offers his seat to a lady, which is something by no means all Japanese men do even if the lady in question, as often happens, has a baby strapped to her back. But it needed the visit here of the young men from Oxford to drive the lesson home.

They came to play Rugby, and in the event, according to the "Asahi Shimbun," generally regarded as the most influential Japanese newspaper, "not only on the field of contest but off it the British athletes set an example in true sportsmanship."

The article continued: "No group of visiting athletes to this country has won such genuine respect among the Japanese people, nor caused such amazement... they did not permit the fact that they were guests in a foreign country to alter the life of austerity they are leading at home."

During their stay here each member had only £20 in spending money, and when they ran out of British cigarettes they bought and smoked a Japanese brand at 40 yen (tenpence) a packet.

"The technical lessons which Japanese Rugby players learned from the visitors were great, but every bit as important was the moral lesson they taught the people. The thing that impressed the Japanese athletes was the gentlemanly behaviour of the players throughout their stay."

"On the playing field they were rough as wild animals, but once the game was over they were complete gentlemen. In clean King's English they spoke in quiet measured tones and always said 'Yes, sir!'"

THIS IS STREAMLINED ACTION

Some disappointment has been expressed over the fact that no action picture has been published in these pages of the fastest woman on earth, Marjorie Jackson, as she appeared at King George V School.

Here is one, all streamlined. Watching the Olympic Champion is Mr J. E. P. Blenkinsop, the Chief Coach of the Hongkong Amateur Athletic Club, who is all convinced that it is Powderhall action—no starting blocks either.

Mr Blenkinsop has one thing in common with Marjorie Jackson's coach—they both learned their sprinting from professionals and follow the old Powderhall technique.—China Mail Photo.

TURPIN MEETS THE MODERN JIM DRISCOLL TODAY

By DENNIS HART

Meet a brave man, George Angelo, Middleweight Champion of South Africa. George is one of the lightest punchers, for his weight, in the business. But tonight he goes into the ring at Harringay against British Champion Randolph Turpin, who packs more punch to the pound than any fighter in Britain, or possibly the world.

The South African, who is fighting Randy for the Empire Middleweight title left vacant by the tragic death of the Australian Dave Sands in a road accident, knows that he must take everything Turpin can throw and will not be able to give half as good as he receives.

How then does Angelo plan to succeed where many good men have failed? How does he hope to stop the Turpin onslaught? The answer is by sheer boxing ability. For George is one of the game's supreme stylists. He is the modern Jim Driscoll.

To him boxing is an art. As such he pursues it fully, and not only with his hands. See his feet weave intricate patterns as he glides gracefully around the ring. Indeed it is the proud claim of his manager, Jim Wicks, that if he forsook the ring, Angelo could earn his living as a ballet dancer.

But in these days when "wrestle and punch" fighting gets by as boxing, the true artist is being crowded out. "Not enough crowd appeal," say the promoters. So it was that eight months ago Angelo, although he had beaten most of the leading middleweights in the country, could not get a fight for love nor money. He even tried offering to fight anyone on a winner-take-all basis.

But when at last he did get a fight, against Jimmy Davis, the tough Bethnal Green middleweight, Angelo's convincing showing did not pass unnoticed, and when an opponent for Turpin was being sought, he was immediately proposed.

He seized the chance eagerly, but he is under no illusions as to the size of the task he is undertaking. And it is in that spirit that he has trained for tonight's fight.

He has had 10 sparring partners, including heavyweights, to provide him with experience against heavy punching, and lighter men to give him practice in countering fast punching. For Turpin combines speed and power.

Towards the end of his training, Angelo was boxing 20 rounds a day. And all the time his opponents were coming on at him. For his only chance against Turpin will be to keep out of trouble, and as his points

Title Wanted For The Olympic Film

Helsinki, Oct. 20.
The film of the Olympic Games will have its premiere on November 15, but thus far no suitable title for the film has been found.

In an effort to solve this difficulty the Olympic Films Company appealed to the public to help find a title. The public responded with 997 suggestions, and many of them certainly did not lack a sense of humour.

"The Carousell of Frenchell" was one suggestion. Others were: "When the Rains Come," "The Mystery of the Five Rings," and "The Games Succeeded in Spite of Everything."

A decision has not been reached yet, but the most likely title is "The Peoples Met Each Other."—United Press.

FINANCIAL POSITION

"Turning to the accounts, I now propose to briefly review the financial position resulting from the year's working." "Gross bar sales and subscriptions are both down on the previous year's figures. The former by $5,000 and the latter by $2,300. This is due to an overall falling off in membership there being 41 members less than at the corresponding date last year, and because of a scorer, rely on his counter-punch—which makes up in accuracy what it lacks in sting. He has already proved himself a shrewd evasive boxer. Against the American Baby Day, last year, he employed the same tactics that Gene Tunney used to win the world heavyweight title from Jack Dempsey. Throughout the fight he maintained an almost non-stop back pedal, and the American could never land a solid blow.

Turpin will test his elusiveness to the utmost. The British Champion has something more at stake than a title fight. His family's honour is involved. For, three years ago, in the same ring, Dave Sands won the championship with a first round knockout over Randy's brother Dick.

To fight Turpin under normal circumstances is a doubtful privilege. To do so when he is seeking revenge is a pleasure which even Sugar Ray Robinson declines.

KOWLOON CRICKET CLUB'S ANNUAL MEETING

In presenting his report to the annual meeting of the Kowloon Cricket Club yesterday the President, Mr E. Abraham, called attention to the very satisfactory report on the year's sporting activities.

He pointed to the successes in cricket and said that the Club's lawn bowls section had made history.

Mr Abraham's address, in part, follows: "Before we proceed with the business of the meeting, I wish to record with deep regret the passing of two of our members. They are Mr N. Kim and Mr F. C. Barry. To the relatives of these departed friends we extend our deep sympathy."

"Your committee is glad to be able to present to you what I consider is a very satisfactory report on the year's sporting activities."

"Our 2nd Eleven were victorious in the cricket league and our 1st Eleven finished third in the league table."

"Our lawn bowls section has made history for the Club. The 2nd and 3rd teams won the championships of their respective Divisions, while our 1st team were runners-up in the 1st Division."

"Since the end of our Club year we have won the Liberation Shield, and the Hongkong Triples were won by Messrs. Cowie, Colledge and Howarth, three very keen bowlers."

"In addition to these successes, our Ladies 'A' team is in a very favourable position in the Ladies' Lawn Bowls League, which has been inaugurated this year in Hongkong."

"The Tennis Section carried out a full programme of Club games but were not notably successful, with the exception of the Mixed 'B' team, who were runners-up."

"The Billiard Room continues to attract the members and we participated in the Colony Snooker championship and the George Younger Snooker League."

"Turning to the accounts, I now propose to briefly review the financial position resulting from the year's working." "Gross bar sales and subscriptions are both down on the previous year's figures. The former by $5,000 and the latter by $2,300. This is due to an overall falling off in membership there being 41 members less than at the corresponding date last year, and because of a

ON THE RECORD

Corroborating A Contemporary

Reporting this morning on the annual general meeting of the Kowloon Cricket Club, a contemporary writes that "After the election, a member, Mr White, suggested that the bar which was now the 'sanctum' for men should be open to ladies also. This suggestion brought thunderous cheers and intense comments from the members. The incoming committee promised to consider this request."

Though our contemporary chose to dismiss this historical event in six point type, the little paragraph recording it has not misreported one iota of what happened.

The atmosphere, as it is at all annual general meetings of the Kowloon Cricket Club, was tense enough. Everyone was set, as usual, not to re-elect the outgoing officers and the re-election, to which everyone was more or less resigned, was greeted with thunderous applause.

The general dissatisfaction was, indeed, so intense that no fewer than three Life Members were elected.

Lost in the throes of Club politics, the meeting failed to notice the rather unusual fact that the Ladies' Room cat was intensely parading the floor, leisurely brushing up its fur against one pair of high-heeled slippers after another.

The cut was indeed, almost in a mood to talk to a king and was, we are assured, a partner to the whole conspiracy.

It was an organised conspiracy in which a chain of circumstances was built up that permitted time enough for the cat to be put to the Village Elders.

The huge blackboard on which the names of the many would-be new Committee members who challenged the prerogative of the old to continue in office fell more than once with a clap of thunder and was finally hurled ponderously on the mantelpiece, immediately behind the Chairman.

It was between two such claps of thunder that Mr White got up to speak. All the subscribers present—the Chairman had already seen it to point to the distinction, thus raising in their own esteem some of the Snooker Room wallas who believe that they own the Club—immediately set their gaze on Mr White with an approving countenance about them.

Never in the history of the struggle for women's rights has a member of the stronger sex so enshrined himself in so short a time. Mr White's demand that the Bar Room be thrown open to the Ladies of the Club was greeted with thunderous applause.

The Ladies transfixed with that hypnotic stare of authority these creatures whom they occasionally refer to patronisingly as their better halves and the first clap—slow and staccato—sounded very much like the rum beat from M'Vongo on the banks of the Congo.

Return Of The Viking

The Viking returned to Cad's (we have yet to be forgiven for once calling it Cat's) Corner yesterday. Hengist was accompanied by Horsa (otherwise known as the Viking's Keeper).

Sirens blew and police cars and fire appliances rushed past with a thunderous clatter to honour the occasion. The Viking, taking the reception in his giant stride, announced that he had moved his money from the bank involved and that if it was an on-the-spot hold-up he had only some plasticine from Saigon on him. He meant plasticine of course, but the Viking can be as entertaining in his language as Mr Samuel Goldwyn is reputed to be.

Present to greet him were the Eniac, the New Australian and the Ash Dropper. Two of them left early so only the Eniac of the three knows whether the Deer Baron, the Director of Public Thought, the Wine Taster, the Shadow, the Ode and the Almost-Abo turned up later.

The Viking is in good health and will be at the Corner to meet the rest of the happy throng any time they care to look him up.

DINNY PAILS ON SEDGMAN

Sydney, Oct. 19.
Australian tennis star Frank Sedgman was a very good player, but not a great player, former Australian Davis Cup player Dinny Pails said here on returning home from America.

He said Sedgman lost too many matches and would be "sticking his neck out" if he turned professional.

"I think Jack Kramer, Pancho Gonzales, and Pancho Segura could beat Sedgman indoors," Pails said.

"Sedgman would be playing on wood, cement, and canvas courts, and if they consistently beat him it would finish his career," Pails added.—Reuter.

Heinz Neuhaus To Defend Title

Dortmund, Oct. 20.
Heinz Neuhaus, European and German Heavyweight Champion, will defend his title here on November 2 against Wilson Mohlbrecher.

Neuhaus was originally scheduled to meet Bill Fenbert (U.S.) in a non-title bout here the same date, but the fight was cancelled after the American suffered an injured hand.—Associated Press.

Western Europe's Largest Power Station Completed

Paris, Oct. 20.

French engineers have again checked the Rhone, unruly river that plunges 500 miles from Alpine heights to the Mediterranean, to generate more electricity than needed by all Paris.

This Saturday the French President, M. Vincent Auriol, will open Western Europe's largest power station, the Donzère-Mondragon hydro-electric project which turns the Rhone into power — two billion kilowatt hours of it — to give light, drive trains and water the fields.

Situated 100 miles South of Lyon, Donzère-Mondragon is on a bigger scale than the famous barrage at Genesiat, 31 miles downstream from Geneva. The Donzère-Mondragon undertaking with its miles of concrete, 17-mile canal, ideal for barge and tanker traffic, and 85-foot lock, is the deepest in the world.

Everything about the Donzère-Mondragon project is massive. It involved half the digging done for the Suez Canal; buying out more than 100 farmers, and the expropriation of almost 2,000 hectares (about 5,000 acres).

A temporary town had to be built to accommodate the 7,000 workers, including North Africans, Italians and Spaniards. Fifty workmen lost their lives in accidents.

It has taken more than four years to complete and cost an estimated 120,000,000 francs at present prices.

The Genesiat project produces about 1,000,000,000 kilowatt hours a year, cost 100 lives and on the same price reckoning cost 40,000,000,000 francs.

20 STATIONS

The Rhone Valley hydro-electric scheme envisages about a score more power stations with a total capacity of 13,000,000 kilowatt hours.

An official of the Compagnie Nationale du Rhone, which is behind these projects to harness the Rhone from the Swiss frontier to the sea, said that the investment costs made by M. Antoine Pinay, the Prime Minister, have not so far affected the programme.

From a technical point of view, work could start on the next station at Montelimar, centre of the world's nougat industry, next January.

Electricity cuts no longer plague French industry and housewives.—Reuter.

War-Damaged Institutions Want Help

Washington, Oct. 20.

An estimated one hundred hospitals, orphanages and schools in the Philippines have asked the United States for $55,000,000 to repair damage suffered from the Japanese military invasion of the islands.

However, the War Claims Commission said today it has only about $20,000,000 to pay such claims.

But quickly following this qualification the same source expressed confidence that additional funds would be available for the purpose if they are needed.

The project to assist in the rehabilitation of these institutions is the outgrowth of a law passed by Congress this year making more than $100,000,000 additional money available to it for payment of war claims of several varieties.

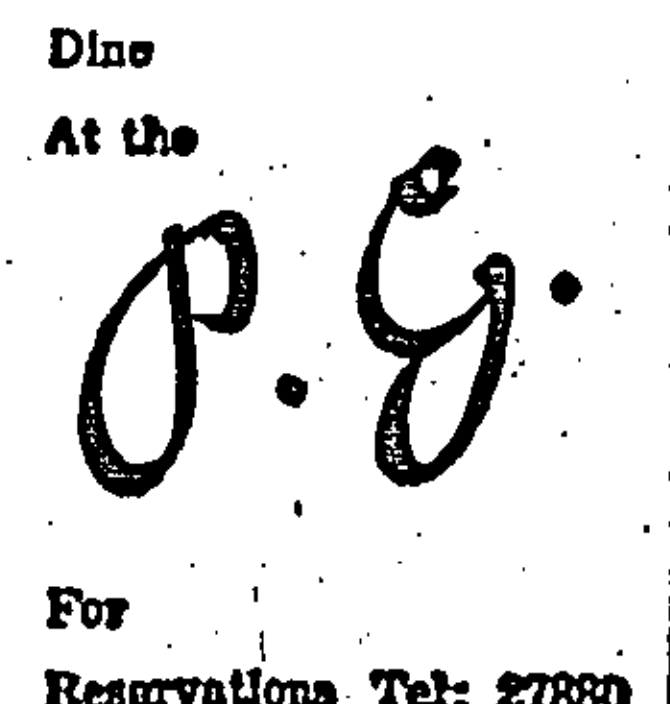

The money comes from liquidation of or income from one-time enemy assets in the U.S. taken over by the Government during the last war.—Associated Press.
